

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Introduction

The myths of our northern ancestors, garnered from Iceland, offer us a wealth of material for stories, which are eagerly listened to by children. The dramatic possibilities of these tales, once told by Norse grandmothers during the "long nights," or sung by wandering scalds, are an inspiration to the story teller. Moreover, these stories hold the seeds of our Germanic civilization: justice, order and unity. They are the thought of a people who could foreshadow, in Ragnarok (The twilight of the gods), an end to their own religious beliefs—an end to things which had served their purpose. The ethical teaching of these stories is not subtle, but deep and strong. The struggles of good with evil, the punishment of evil, and the triumph of good are drawn with strong lights and shadows, and with a simple dignity which appeals to children. The dramatic action and poetic setting reveal the sturdy Norse race dependent on the sword for sustenance, living among the phenomena of the frozen north, where nature is full of mysterious suggestion. For the wondering children the stories teem with frost-giants, light-elves and elves of darkness, dwarfs and hideous monsters, as well as gods and goddesses, dauntless heroes, and strong, fierce women.

In outlining a course of Norse hero tales, a welding of those from the Volsunga saga and the Nibelungenlied is desirable. In the Volsunga saga, Brynhild appears in all the glory of her shield-hung castle where

"Without all around it Sweeps the red flame aloft," while in the Nibelungenlied the northern lights die down and chivalry is predominant.

Wagner drew much of his material for the Nibelungen ring from the Volsunga saga, but preserved the chivalry of the Nibelungenlied, and used as the main thread of his plot the tragedy of the gods as told in the Elder edda. If the story teller follows somewhat the same method, she can make a connected narrative which will hold the children from one story hour to another and enable her to present fragments as a whole. For this purpose, she should read the Volsunga saga, translated by Magnússon and Morris, Carlyle's essay on "The hero as divinity," in Heroes and hero-worship, and as much as possible of Rasmus B. Anderson's Norse mythology, and Chapin's Story of the Rhinegold.

The following brief suggestions for preparing and telling stories may be helpful, as a story which is worth telling is worth preparing thoroughly, and once prepared, it may be told over and over again in the children's room, school room or home.

How to Prepare the Story

Select a story with a definite plot and full of action; study it carefully, making each of its points thoroughly your own, so that when the time comes to tell it, you will not have to look ahead to remember your plot. A great deal depends upon this. When it is possible, learn your story from a good translation of the original, and avoid using versions written for children. For the Norse stories, exceptions may be made in favor of Baldwin's Story of Siegfried, Mabie's Norse stories, and Abbie F. Brown's In the days of giants. Make the language simple and direct. Children like conversation and short, vivid description; and small children love much repetition.

How to Tell the Story

Know your story thoroughly and be so interested in it that you forget yourself. It is better not to have more than 25 or 30 children in a group. Some story tellers prefer to separate the boys and girls into different groups. This is, however, a matter of taste, as the Norse stories are of equal interest to both boys and girls. The success of the story will depend on its informality, for it is a pleasure hour to the children, not a lesson hour. Adapt yourself to the children's pleasure and do anything to keep them from becoming self-conscious. Let them choose their own way of listening to the story—let them sit on the floor or on chairs, as they like. A room furnished with a large rug and plenty of hassocks makes an ideal story room. A short informal chat with the children before settling down to the story helps greatly. Begin your story with as little introduction as possible. An ideal method of beginning a story may be learned from Grimm and Andersen, and often a reference to a favorite character in a former story will take the children's attention at once. Make your points simple, direct and logical, weaving in some description for the girls and much action for the boys, being careful not to make descriptions tedious. Avoid moralizing, for if a Norse story is good enough to tell, it will do its own teaching without comment from the story teller. Watch your audience, and if the interest flags, be ready to enlarge on exciting incidents. Story telling requires resourcefulness, which can be learned only from experience. It is sometimes necessary to change completely the tenor of a story to adapt it to one's audience. Occasionally it is a good plan to read to the children short passages from a classic version, by preference a good metrical one. This should be done judiciously, however, for when reading aloud it is difficult to hold the attention of a group of children under twelve years of age.

A child knows when the story teller loves her story, and he loves it with her. No one, however, is quicker than he to detect patronage, lack of interest or self-conscious mannerisms; then his interest is quickly turned to scorn and open mirth. Children are keen critics when they feel insincerity in others; but the story teller who loves children and has had the privilege of telling many stories to them, knows there is no greater stimulus than that of upturned faces, widening eyes and breathless interest.

The primary object of story telling is to stimulate the imagination of the children, cultivate a taste for good literature and direct them to the best books. For five years Greek and Norse myths, King Arthur legends, nursery tales and other stories have been told to children in the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh, with the most encouraging results. This winter the Norse stories are to be told in several of the Pittsburgh schools; and this pamphlet, which embodies the results of our experience, is issued as an aid to the teachers in these schools, as well as to the students in our Training School for Children's Librarians.

Annotated Reading List on Norse Literature, the Nibelungenlied, and Life in Modern Scandinavia

The most useful books are marked with an asterisk (*), except in the lists on "Scandinavian folklore," "Tales of the Vikings," and "Life in modern Scandinavia." These books are so miscellaneous in character that it seemed best not to attempt to use the asterisk. The annotations will guide the story teller to the right material.

Some books not of the first importance have been included in this reading list, because they are in this Library and probably in many others, and have been found very useful to the story teller unable to secure enough copies of the best books.

Books for Story Teller and Young People

Norse Mythology

Anderson, R. B.

- *Norse mythology293 A54
 "An admirably methodical and lucid account of Norse ideas as embodied in the elder and younger Edda, with some assistance from later sagas, the whole being so fully illustrated with translated extracts as to leave the reader nothing to desire." Nation.

Arnold, Matthew.

- Balder dead. (In his Poetical works, p.101.)821 A757
 A narrative poem in blank verse giving in detail the Norse myth of Baldur the Beautiful. The lines describing the burning of Baldur's ship are especially fine.

Bulfinch, Thomas.

- Age of fable; or, Beauties of mythology; ed. by E. E. Hale. .292 B87
 Three chapters are devoted to northern mythology. Good, but very brief.

Carlyle, Thomas.

- *Hero as divinity. (In his Heroes, hero-worship and the heroic in history, p.7.)824 C21
 This essay on Odin, paganism and Scandinavian mythology will be found very helpful to the story teller who wishes to become thoroughly imbued with the true spirit of the Norse belief and to gain an insight into its essential characteristics and its real meaning.

Elder edda.

- Edda Saemundar hinns froda: the Edda of Saemund the Learned; from the Old Norse of Icelandic, with a mythological index and an index of persons and places, by Benjamin Thorpe. 2v.
 Out of print.

- Recovery of Thor's hammer; tr. by Benjamin Thorpe. (In Palmer. Stories from the classic literature of many nations, p.149.)j808 P19
 Relates how Thor in Freyja's falcon guise got back his magic hammer from Thrym, the frost giant.

Gayley, C. M.

- Classic myths in English literature292 G25
 Based on Bulfinch's "Age of fable"; but is arranged for school use and contains more literary quotations. There is a chapter on the Norse myths and one outlining the Sigurd saga and the Nibelungenlied. The chapter on the "Preservation of myths" gives a brief account of the Eddas, sagas and old German epics, and additional material is given in the commentary.

- Gayley, C. M.—continued.
- Gray, Thomas.
Vegtam's kivitha; or, Descent of Odin. (In his Poetical works, p.75.)821 G81p
A poem telling how Odin, alarmed for the life of Baldur, rides to Hela's dread abode to consult a powerful vala.
- Guerber, H. M. A.
Myths of northern lands293 G95
A good outline of the northern mythology. The myths are narrated with special reference to literature and art, but the physical significance is explained briefly. Most of the illustrations are reproductions of paintings.
- Larned, Augusta.
Tales from the Norse grandmotherj293 L32
The book is not attractive in appearance and is not written in a very entertaining manner, but it contains material not usually found in books on the subject, such as the chapters on "The ancient German," "The age of Harald Fairhair," "Life in ancient Iceland," and "The two Olafs."
- Snorro Sturluson.
Death of Balder, from the Younger edda; tr. by R. B. Anderson. (In Palmer. Stories from the classic literature of many nations, p.153.)j808 Pr9
The Baldur myth as it is related in Snorro's edda.
*Younger edda; with an introduction, notes, vocabulary and index by R. B. Anderson839.6 S67
"The story of the origin of this singular collection, and the various conjectures which have been advanced in regard to its character and literary worth are ably discussed; the translation is clear and vivid, and a full vocabulary and index complete the equipment of the book as a valuable work of reference." Nation.
- Stern, H. I.
Gods of our fathers: a study of Saxon mythology.....293 S83
Outlines the system of Norse mythology and aims to show how the thought and character of the Teutonic peoples have been affected by these primitive beliefs.
- Thorpe, Benjamin, comp.
Northern mythology. 3v.....293 T41
v.1. Northern mythology.
v.2. Scandinavian popular traditions and superstitions.
v.3. North German and Netherlandish popular traditions and superstitions.
Out of print. Useful for reference if it can be obtained.
- Wagner, Wilhelm.
Asgard and the gods; the tales and traditions of our northern ancestors, a manual of Norse mythology; ed. by W. S. W. Anson j293 W13
Includes not only an account of the religious beliefs of the Norsemen, but many legends and traditions, such as those of the Lorelei and the Wild huntsman. Contains also passages translated from the old Norse poems.

Volsunga Saga

- Cox, Sir G. W. & Jones, E. H.
Stories of the Volsungs. (In their Popular romances of

- Cox, Sir G. W. & Jones, E. H.—continued.
 the middle ages, p.240.)398 C85
 Gives the whole story of the Volsunga saga in a simple prose form.
- Gayley, C. M.
 Saga of the Volsungs. (In his Classic myths in English literature, p.392.)292 G25
 Outline of the saga, with quotations from William Morris's "Sigurd the Volsung."
- Guerber, H. M. A.
 Sigurd saga. (In her Myths of northern lands, p.225.)293 G95
 A clear account of the story of the Volsungs with extracts from "Sigurd the Volsung" by William Morris.
- Morris, William.
 Slaying of the Niblungs. (In Henley. Lyra heroica, p.293.)j821.o8 H44
 An extract from "Sigurd the Volsung."
 *Story of Sigurd the Volsung and the fall of the Niblungs... 821 M91
 The old story of Sigurd Fafnir's-bane, but re-created by the magic power of William Morris, the typical sagaman of modern literature. There is a wonderful atmosphere of romance combined with strength and vigor of expression, while "the very breath of the north seems to flow across these lines as the polar wind across the green waves of the North Sea."
- Müller, P. E.
 Saga of the Völsungs and Giukings. (In Thorpe. North-ern mythology, v.1, p.91.)293 T41
 Brief sketch of the saga.
- Volsunga saga.
 Drawing of the sword from the Branstock; tr. by Eiríkr Magnússon and William Morris. (In Palmer. Stories from the classic literature of many nations, p.157.)j808 P19
 A selection from the translation of the Volsunga saga by Magnússon and Morris, retold by the editor.
 *Völsunga saga: the story of the Volsungs and Niblungs, with certain songs from the Elder edda; tr. by Eiríkr Magnússon and William Morris839.6 V37
 "Every student of popular legendary lore will find this faithful and fine translation highly valuable; and it is, moreover, a thing to be grateful for, as a permanent accession to English literature." Athenaeum.

Nibelungenlied

- Carlyle, Thomas.
 *Nibelungen lied. (In his Critical and miscellaneous essays, v.2, p.216.)824 C21C2 v.2
 An historical account of the Nibelungenlied with an analysis of the plot and extracts translated by Carlyle.
- Cox, Sir G. W. & Jones, E. H.
 Nibelung story. (In their Popular romances of the middle ages, p.276.)398 C85
 A good condensed version of the Nibelungenlied.
- Gayley, C. M.
 Lay of the Nibelungs. (In his Classic myths in English literature, p.400.)292 G25
 Gives an outline of the Nibelungenlied with extracts from the translation by W. N. Lettson.

Guerber, H. M. A.

Nibelungenlied. (In her Legends of the middle ages, p.53.) 398 G95p
The story is given in brief, with extracts from the translation by W. N. Lettsom.

Nibelungenlied.

*Fall of the Nibelungers; tr. by W. N. Lettsom.....831 N31fa

Nibelungen lied; tr. by A. G. Foster-Barham.....831 N31

"The translation of Mr. Lettsom has considerable merit, but is far from being wholly satisfactory either in point of scholarship or of literary qualities; and Mr. Foster-Barham's work is in both respects distinctly inferior to that of his predecessor...On the whole, however, the translation [Mr. Foster-Barham's] very fairly represents the sense, and its defects of style will not prevent its being read with pleasure by those who are not acquainted with the poem in any other form."
Athenaeum.

Removal of the treasure; from the Nibelungenlied; tr. by W. N. Lettsom. (In Palmer. Stories from the classic literature of many nations, p.137.) j808 P19
Tells how the "wondrous treasure bright" was brought from the Nibelungen land to the Rhine.

Woodward, A. A.

Echoes from mist-land; or, The Nibelungen lay.....831 W86

The Nibelungenlied somewhat condensed and told in a simple, direct prose form which might be interesting to young people. An introduction of 54 pages gives an account of the different versions of the Nibelungen story.

Anderson, R. B.

Viking tales of the north j839.6 A54

Contents: The sagas of Thorstein, Viking's son, and of Fridthjof the Bold; tr. from the Icelandic by R. B. Anderson.—Tegner's Fridthjof's saga; tr. from the Swedish by George Stephens.

Boyesen, H. H.

Story of Norway. (Story of the nations.).....948.1 B66

In writing this history of Norway, the author has dwelt upon the dramatic phases of historical events, tales of the vikings and the adventurous men whose deeds are related in the sagas. Only two chapters are devoted to modern Norway.

Cox, Sir G. W. & Jones, E. H.

Popular romances of the middle ages398 C85

Partial contents: Stories of the Volsungs.—Nibelung story.—Walter of Aquitaine.—Story of Hugdietrich and Hildeburg.—Gudrun lay.—Story of Frithjof and Ingebjorg.—Grettir the Strong.—Gunnlaug and the fair Helga.—Burnt Njal.

"Probably the most valuable of the several manuals on the subject of the folk-lore of Europe. It contains all the more important of the tales that enter so largely into the romantic literature of modern times...The book, therefore, is valuable alike to the student of literature and the student of history." C. K. Adams in 1889.

Du Chaillu, P. B.

*Viking age. 2v.....913.4 D86

"In these two volumes Du Chaillu succeeds in giving us a vivid picture ...of the character and life, religious, social, political and warlike, of the old Norsemen, from their birth to their grave." R. B. Anderson.

Gibb, John.

Gudrun, Beowulf and Roland, with other mediaeval tales...j398 G35

Three of the stories, Gudrun, Hilda, and Wild Hagen, are taken from the Lay of Gudrun; the story of Walter and Hildegund from the Latin poem by the Monk of St. Gall. The book is out of print.

- Guerber, H. M. A.
 Legends of the middle ages 398 G951
 A synopsis of the principal epics and romances of the mediaeval period. Those belonging to the Teutonic cycle are: Beowulf.—Gudrun.—Nibelungenlied.—Langobardian myths.—The Amelungs.—Dietrich von Bern.—Story of Frithiof.—Ragnar Lodbrok. The legends are very much condensed and contain short quotations to illustrate the style of the poems in which they are found.
- Legends of the Rhine 398 G95
 A collection of the romantic legends which cluster about the moss-grown ruins and quaint towns and cities of the Rhine. There is a synopsis of the Siegfried story on page 26.
- Stories of the Wagner opera 782.2 G95
Contents: Rienzi.—Flying Dutchman.—Tannhäuser.—Lohengrin.—Tristan and Ysolde.—Mastersingers of Nuremberg.—Nibelung's ring.—Walkyrie.—Siegfried.—Dusk of the gods.—Parsifal.
 Legends as treated in the operas, related in straightforward and attractive prose without discussion of musical theories.
- Kingsley, Charles.
 *Hereward, the last of the English K272h
 An historical romance based on old ballads and chronicles. The book brings out that spirit of personal independence which characterizes the Northmen and the "scenes are thrown off and finished with a vigor which is proportioned to their importance."
 Recommended to the story teller because of the realistic presentation of the life of the period.
- Magnússon, Eiríkr, & Morris, William, tr.
 Three northern love stories, and other tales; tr. from the Icelandic 839.6 M25
Contents: Story of Gunnlaug the Worm-tongue and Raven the Skald.—Story of Frithiof the Bold.—Story of Viglund the Fair.—Tale of Hogni and Hedinn.—Tale of Roi the Fool.—Tale of Thorstein Staff-smitten.
 "It is to be hoped that all lovers of literature will turn to these pages in which Mr. Morris has enshrined the grand legends of our forefathers in the crystal of his pure and idiomatic English." Edmund Gosse.
- Morris, William.
 *Tale of the house of the Wolfings and all the kindreds of the mark M918t
 An idyl of Thiodolf, the great war-duke of the Mark-men, and the Wood-sun, a daughter of the gods, told in prose and verse. The peculiar charm of the book lies in the poetic quality of its prose. "So poetic, indeed, is the prose in this fascinating volume that even the verse, fine as it is, seems to fade in the midst of it." Though the book has no connection with the Norse legends, it is suggested that the story teller read it in order to gain something of its poetical spirit and mediaeval coloring.
- Nansen, Fridtjof.
 Farthest north. 2v. 919.8 N12
 The record of the voyage of the ship Fram, 1893-96, and of a fifteen months' sleigh journey by Dr Nansen and Lieutenant Johansen. It emphasizes the hardihood, daring and indomitable perseverance of the Norse character and gives one a deepened sense of the mystery, awe and fascination of the polar world. The numerous illustrations and colored plates increase the attractiveness of the work and aid in making it of interest to young people.
- Njal's saga.
 Story of burnt Njal; or, Life in Iceland at the end of the tenth century; tr. by Sir G. W. Dasent 839.6 N37
 A translation of one of the Icelandic sagas. The events related occurred at the time of the conflict between Christianity and the religion of Odin. The introduction contains much valuable matter on the manners, customs and institutions of the Icelandic race.
- Palmer, Bertha, ed.
 Stories from the classic literature of many nations. j808 P19
 Gives selections, chosen for their story element. The German stories are:

Palmer, Bertha, ed.—continued.

The combat between Hildebrand and Hadubrand, from the Hildebrandslied.—Removal of the treasure, from the Nibelungenlied.—Singing of Horant, from Gudrun. The Scandinavian stories are: Recovery of Thor's hammer, from the Elder edda.—Death of Balder, from the Younger edda.—Drawing of the sword from the Branstock, from the Volsunga saga.—Fridthjof at chess, from the Saga of Fridthjof.

Snorro Sturluson.

Stories of the kings of Norway called the Round world, (Heimskringla); done into English out of the Icelandic by William Morris and Eiríkr Magnússon. v.1-3. (Saga library, v.3-5.)839.6 S12
Tales "concerning those chiefs who have borne sway in the Northlands." They present an unmistakably true and vivid picture of the whole social life of the time and are "to be reckoned among the great history-books of the world."

Tegnér, Esaias.

Passages from Frithiof's saga; tr. by H. W. Longfellow. (In Longfellow. Complete poetical works, p.598.)811 L82c Passages translated are: Frithiof's homestead.—Sledge-ride on the ice.—Frithiof's temptation.—Frithiof's farewell.

Wagner, Wilhelm.

Epics and romances of the middle ages398 W12
A volume of legendary lore which supplements his "Asgard and the gods." Contains the principal hero-lays of the Teutonic middle ages: Langobardian legends.—Amelungs.—Dietrich of Bern.—The Nibelung hero.—The Nibelungs' woe.—Hegeling legend.—Beowulf.

*Story of Siegfried. (Heroes of the olden time.).....j293 B19

Legends of the semi-mythological hero of the North drawn from the Eddas, the Volsunga saga and the Nibelungenlied, and woven into a continuous story. The author has omitted the more barbaric elements of the legends and has brought out strongly the chivalrous spirit of the Nibelungenlied. The book contains also many of the Norse myths. They are full of the mystery, awe and poetry of the northern lands.

Bradish, S. P.

Old Norse storiesj293 B68

Norse myths retold for children. Contains also stories of the Volsungs from the Volsunga saga.

Brown, A. F.

*In the days of giants: a book of Norse tales.....j293 B78

Contains the stories which were told of old by the northern folk about the gods, their deeds and their shining city of Asgard. They are well written and will interest and attract the boys and girls of to-day.

Who, leaving her snow summits, breezy and free,
Went down to be wedded to Njörd of the sea."

Litchfield, M. E.

Nine worlds: stories from Norse mythologyj293 L73

Told as a connected story and with considerable detail.

Longfellow, H. W.

Tegnér's drapa. (In his Complete poetical works, p.111.)..811 L82c

A short poem on the death of Baldur.

Mabie, H. W.

*Norse stories retold from the Eddasj293 M11

One of the most popular of the Norse story books. Though the myths lack something of the barbaric strength and rugged dignity which naturally belong to them, they are told in a graceful manner and with much literary charm of expression. The new edition is attractively bound and illustrated.

Pratt, M. L.
Legends of Norseland.....j293 P88
May be used for young children.

Pyle, Katharine.
Thör at Jotünheim. (In her Where the wind blows, he was tricked by the frost giants.

Volsunga Saga

Bradish, S. P.
*Stories of the Volsungs. (In her Old Norse stories, p.121.)j293 B68
These stories of Sigurd, "the prince of the sunlight, who killed the dragon of cold and darkness and waked the dawn maiden," are adapted from the poetical version of William Morris in his "Story of Sigurd the Volsung" and the translation by Morris and Magnússon of the ancient Sigurd saga. Includes quotations from the former.

Lang, Andrew.
Story of Sigurd. (In his Red fairy book, p.357.).....j398 L23r but is very much condensed.

Nibelungenlied

Church, A. J.
Treasure of the Nibelungs. (In his Heroes of chivalry and romance, p.215.)j398 C46
A "story of noble heroes, and of the great deeds which they wrought."
It follows closely the plot of the Nibelungenlied and is told clearly and simply.

Pratt, M. L.
Nibelungen lied. (In her Stories from old Germany, p.7.)..j838 P88
In telling the Nibelungen story Miss Pratt has omitted the death of Siegfried and the revenge of Gudrun. Though the book is not to be recommended, it may be found necessary to use it with the younger readers.

Ragozin, Mme Z. A.
*Siegfried the hero of the north, and Beowulf the hero of the Anglo-Saxons. (Tales of the heroic ages.).....j293 R15
The first story is based on the Nibelungenlied. It is put into clear form, and the language is simple and vivid.

Stories drawn chiefly from the Volsunga Saga and the Nibelungenlied

Baldwin, James.
*Story of Siegfried.....j293 B19
Legends of the semi-mythological hero of the North drawn from the Eddas, the Volsunga saga and the Nibelungenlied, and woven into a continuous story. The author has omitted the more barbaric elements of the legends and has brought out strongly the chivalrous spirit of the Nibelungenlied. The book contains also many of the Norse myths. They are full of the mystery, awe and poetry of the northern lands.

Barber, G. E.
Wagner opera storiesj782.2 B23
In adapting these stories for children the author omits all mention of Gudrun and the death of Siegfried, and the spirit as well as the form has been changed.

- Burt, M. E.
 Story of the German Iliadj831 B949
 Prepared as a school reader for the sixth and seventh grades. The plot of the Nibelungenlied is followed in most respects, but the story is much condensed. The book is really a paraphrase of the translation by Jonathan Birch and many of his quaint verses have been retained. Contains also the "Sleeping beauty" and other stories related to the myth of Brynhild.
- Chapin, A. A.
 *Story of the Rhinegold.....j782.2 C36
 Miss Chapin gives the whole story of the Wagner opera. She emphasizes the fatal curse of the ring and the downfall of the gods.
- Frost, W. H.
 Wagner story bookj782.2 F96
 Stories from the Wagner operas told very simply and prettily as "fire-light tales" to a little girl. No names are used and in consequence the outline of the stories is somewhat vague.
- Marsh, G. P.
 Norseman's sword. (In Johonnot. Stories of the olden time, p.43.)j904 J37
 A legend of Vanlander, the Scandinavian Vulcan. It is quite similar to the Siegfried story of the forging of the sword Balmung.
- Maud, Constance.
 Brunhilda. (In her Wagner's heroines, p.13.).....j782.2 M48w
 The first story of the series is devoted to Brynhild. The facts are told in a straightforward manner, intelligible to young people.
- Menefee, Maud.
 Story of Siegfried. (In her Child stories from the masters, p.51.) jM619c
 Simplified as to details and adapted for telling to quite young children.

Scandinavian Folklore

- Andersen, H. C.
 Fairy talesqjA544fai
The same; tr. by Mrs E. LucasjA544fy
The same; tr. by H. L. BraekstadqrjA544f
 Though not strictly folklore, many of Andersen's stories are adaptations of old legends and tales which he had heard when he was a child. R. Nisbet Bain says, "Andersen also drew largely from the common stock and such little masterpieces as 'The Tinder Box' and 'The Wild Swans' are living instances of the inimitable skill with which he could transform a good old story into a new one." Others of these stories are: Little Claus and Big Claus.—Holger Danske.—Marsh king's daughter.—Snow queen.—The storks.
- Asbjørnsen, P. C.
 Fairy tales from the far north; tr. by H. L. Braekstad.....jA799f
 The original illustrations by Sinding, Werenskiold and Kittelson are reproduced in this volume. Some of the stories are identical with those in the collection by Sir G. W. Dasent.
 "In Asbjørnsen's tales the English readers will find in its quintessence the genius and temper of the Norwegian peasant." Edmund Gosse.
 Round the Yule log; tr. by H. L. BraekstadjA799r
 Stories of brownies and trolls told around a blazing fire one Christmas in Norway.
 *Tales from the fjeld; tr. by Sir G. W. DasentjA799t
 An interesting volume of Norwegian fairy tales.
 "It is the 'Mother English' into which the translator 'tried to turn his Norse original' which has made and will preserve this collection a classic, remarkable among all translations for its idiomatic purity." Nation.

- Bay, J. C.
 Danish fairy and folk talesj398 B33
 "There is none of the subtle wisdom of the Oriental fable, but a rugged directness and a healthful desire to punish bad people and reward the good, though the standards of conduct are as usual somewhat primitive. In spite of their more simple and clumsy form, many of the tales bear an interesting cousinship to our nursery favorites."
Literary world.
- Folk-lore and legends: Scandinavian 398 F71 v.6

How the Northmen discovered North America.

Du Chaillu, P. B.

- Ivar the Viking D864i
"The history of the Norse chieftain begins with his birth, tells of his fostering away from home, of his education, his expeditions and his voyages, and finally of his accession to rule upon the death of his father. The story is characteristically spirited and the romantic part, at least, leaves nothing to be desired." Nation.

Edgar, J. G.

- Harold Hardrada. (In Edgar. Sea-kings and naval heroes, p.44.) j923.5 E28
An account of a famous Norwegian king, one of the "most valiant of the Scandinavians, and the last among them who led the adventurous life whose charm had vanished with the religion of Odin."
Hasting. (In Edgar. Sea-kings and naval heroes, p.27.) . . . j923.5 E28
The various adventures of one of the most formidable of the sea kings.
Rollo the Norman. (In Edgar. Sea-kings and naval heroes, p.11.) j923.5 E28

 age. The incidents are taken from the story of Olaf in the Heims-kringla.
 Skeleton in armor. (In his Complete poetical works, p.11.) 811 L82c
The same. (In Arnold & Gilbert. Reader for fifth grades, p.176.) j808.8 A75r
 "This vigorous poem opens with a rare abruptness. The author, full of the Norseland, was inspired by his novel theme, and threw off a ringing carol of the sea-rover's training, love, adventure. The cadences and imagery belong together, and the measure, that of Drayton's Agin-court, is better than any new one for its purpose." E. C. Stedman.
- Longfellow, H. W. ed.
 Poems of places. v.8 821.08 L82 v.8
